POSTLETHWAIT IS TOP 5

Postlethwait Middle School was recently recognized by the sports entertainment icon ESPN as a Top 5 Special Olympics Unified Champion School for excellence in inclusion of students with disabilities. Postlethwait was selected from a field of more than 7,600 Special Olympics Unified Champion Schools. It is the first time a Delaware school has earned this honor. Postlethwait was accompanied by Theodore Roosevelt High School (Des Moines, IA); University of Minnesota Twin Cities (Minneapolis, MN), Mayfield High School (Las Cruces, NM); and Champlain Valley Union High School (Hinesburg, VT).

Inclusion is a foundational pillar of equity in the education setting.

"Being recognized as a [Unified Champion School] is a true testament to the school and community that Postlethwait Middle School is committed to ensuring that all students have an opportunity to participate in a program where everyone is welcome and [everyone] belongs," - Kristina Failing, Principal

THE EQUITY CORNER

As educators we must remember that the students are our “why!” They are the reason we commit to doing this work. We must be mindful that equity is not about giving all students the same tools to succeed, it’s about giving each student the tools necessary to enable her/him to succeed.

Equitable learning environments are much like a tailored suit in the fact that it may look very similar to another, but it is unique. It may have the same color, fabric, and pattern, but the fit is custom designed to the dimensions of the person. Equitable learning environments are specifically tailored to the needs of each student to foster an environment conducive to that individual’s success.
Native American Heritage Month

On August 3, 1990, President of the United States George H. W. Bush declared the month of November as National American Indian Heritage Month, thereafter commonly referred to as Native American Heritage Month. During this month we call upon Federal, State and local governments, groups, organizations and the citizens of the United States to celebrate the contributions and culture of America’s indigenous people with appropriate programs, ceremonies and activities.

A Local Presence to Celebrate

We are extremely fortunate to have a local presence of the indigenous people of Kent County represented by the citizens of the Lenape Indian Tribe of Delaware. The local Lenape are led by Principal Chief Dennis J. Coker. Under Chief Coker’s leadership to protect the cultural identity of Lenape people through educational, social and cultural programs and to promote the physical and economic health of their citizens through specialized health and economic development programs tailored to their needs. We also advocate for the civil and human rights of our community and our citizens.

Transgender Day of Remembrance

November 20th is Transgender Day of Remembrance (TDoR). (TDoR) is a day to memorialize those who have been killed as a result of transphobia, or the hatred or fear of transgender and gender non-conforming people, and acts to bring attention to the continued violence endured by the transgender community.

The Transgender Day of Remembrance was founded in 1998 by Gwendolyn Ann Smith. Learn more
Shirley Chisholm had long been known for breaking barriers. Four years before, she'd become the first black U.S. Congresswoman in history as a Representative of her New York district. When she launched her primary campaign in January of '72, she became the first black person to seek the presidential nomination from one of the two major parties (the first woman was Margaret Chase Smith, who sought the Republican nomination in 1964). Her slogan was: “Unbought and Unbossed.”

Her opponents were all white men, but there was one in particular who stood out in relation to her: George Wallace, the former governor of Alabama who famously called for “segregation now, segregation tomorrow and segregation forever.” It was incredible that a black woman and the man who had been the face of southern segregation were competing in the same primary.

Chisholm arrived at the Democratic convention with 152 delegates, far too few to win the nomination but her candidacy opened the door for other Black and female candidates to run for President.

SHIRLEY CHISHOLM: AN AMERICAN [S]HERO

Born in Brooklyn, NY in 1924, Shirley would split time between her place of birth and the West Indian home of her parents (Barbados). It was during her time in Barbados that she received her early education in a one-room school house. It was that experience that she credited for her ability to write and speak well. Shirley would later return to her birthplace in 1934.

Shirley would complete her high school education and earn a bachelor’s degree in Brooklyn, NY before going on to earn a master’s degree from Columbia University. Upon completion of her studies, Shirley held various positions in early childhood education in Brooklyn and Manhattan, including running day care centers. In the late 1950s and 1960s she got involved in local politics, including the League of Women Voters.

Chisholm’s first elected position was as a member of the New York State Assembly from 1965-68. After her time in the Assembly, Chisholm decided to make a run for Congress in 1968. She became the first black woman elected to Congress, as well as the first black representative from Brooklyn. She would go on to be reelected six times and have a very productive career as a representative before retiring in 1982.
